WAITING FOR THE CORONER.

A false impression prevails that when a dead body is found, it must not be moved, until the coroner has viewed it. As the question was raised in the case of William Brewer, found dead at Irondale last Saturday, the following article on the subject from the Philadelphia Press of Tuesday is timely. In answer to the question as to whether a dead body found on a railroad track could be removed before the coroner came, it says:

As a general thing the safest course for the discoverer of a dead body is to leave it untouched until other witnesses have seen it, and, where convenient, until the Coroner appears. The reason of this is obvious. The position and condition in which a body is found shed light on the circumstances attending his death, and it is important that this evidence should not be destroyed or rendered less certain by the hasty action of the first finder. Moreover, it is always possible that the officious meddler with the body of a man who has been killed may raise against himself an embarassing presumption that he had something to do with his death. It is both wisdom and prudence, therefore, for the discoverer of a dead body to disturb it as little as possible until others, and, if possible, the representative of the law, shall have seen it as it originally revealed itself.

To this common-sense rule there are many exceptions. If the body discovered near Fallsington was lying on the railroad track, no rational person, however ignorant, would maintain that it should have been left there to be crushed and mangled by succeeding trains, instead of being removed from the rails. Moreover, it is not always certain that life is extinct when a body, apparently dead, is first discovered, and by leaving the body untouched while waiting for the Coroner the opportunity to resuscitate it may be lost. We know a case where a son found his father's body in a stream of water. With filial energy he secured the body, fastened a rope around it which he secured to a tree, and then in obedience to the superstition that the Coroner must view the body before it is removed from its original environment he waited and watched for hours his father's floating body until the Coroner arrived. If there was life in the body when discovered it had fled before the Coroner could pass judgment upon it. In the same spirit the crew of a tugboat which plies in the Delaware recently hauled through the water to the wharf a young woman still living who had jumped into the river from a passing steamboat. The boat's crew thought that she was dead, and that they had no right to take her body from the water until authorized by the Coroner, and because their brains were charged with this ancient piece of misinformation the young woman was drowned.

Our public schools teach many things but it would be well if in some way information were given to the rising generation that when a supposed dead body is discovered it is not necessary to assume that the body is certainly dead or to outrage all human instincts and natural feeling by leaving the body exposed and subject to further injury until the Coroner appears on the scene. The functionary is charged with the duty of inquiring into cases of sudden death, but until he arrives it is not necessary that the bystanders should be stricken with paralysis or refuse to act with ordinary common sense.

COUNTY INSTITUTE.

The program for the coming county institute to be held Nov. 13th to 17th has been completed and printed.

The following excellent talent has been secured for evening entertainments. Dr. John B. DeMott, Dr. Levin Irvin Herndy, Col. George. W. Bain, and the the Ollie Torbett Concert Co.

Col. Bain is well known to many of our people, the others are new. Dr. DeMott's illustrated lectures are superior to anything of the kind ever given.

Dr. Herndy, a relative of Patrick Henry, is a typical southern man and a great orator, possessing many characteristics of his illustrious relative.

The Ollie Torbett Concert Co. is one of the finest and best musical organizations available.

Tickets for the course $1.50. The public can purchase tickets and reserve seats at Dentler's any time on and after Nov. 2nd. 10-27 3t.

Gidding & Salsburg have received another new line of Suits and Overcoats at prices much below their real worth. The closeness of money has caused the drop and their customers get the benefit of close spot cash buying.

HALLOW E'EN CHARMS.

OLD SUPERSTITIONS BY THE AID OF WHICH A MAID MAY DISCOVER WHOM SHE WILL WED.

Many and strange are the rites and superstitions that cling to Hallowe'en. Here are some of them.

If you are brave enough to tempt the powers of darkness, supposed to be abroad on the last night of October, walk three times around a church at midnight strewing hempseed, and repeating:

Hempseed I sow,
Hempseed I strow,
He that is my true love
Come after me and mow.

On the third round your future husband will appear behind you with a scythe.

A favorite but ghastly trick in the old conntries is the throwing of a ball of yarn into the well. Begin to wind it up and say:

I wind, I wind,
My true love you to find.

With the end of the yarn he will rise, seated in his coffin.

Comb your hair before the parlor mirror, at the same time eating an apple, and he will look over your shoulder in the glass as the clock strikes 12.

Leave soap, towels, brush and razor on the bureau, lie awake and watch, and at 12 o'clock he will enter, shave himself, and retire. If he fails to come you are doomed to be an old maid.

If there happens to be a new moon on Hallowe'en, go out to the gate alone, and repeat the couplet:

New moon, true moon, reveal unto me.
This night who my husband is to be.

He will appear before you. It is recounted, that a lass who tried this was whipped up and borne away by a horseman in a black cloak.

Less tragic was the experience of the girl who put a pan of ashes at her bedside, expecting to see the name of her future husband written in it next morning. During the night her brother stole slyly in, and this is what she found:

Trying tricks is but a notion,
Death and hell shall be thy portion.

If you would bring the absent love to your side, make a little rag doll and name it with his name. Wish that he will have neither rest nor peace until he comes, and bury it in hot coals and ashes on the hearth, where it will smoulder slowly. By the time it has burned away he will arrive. This seems to have originated from the melting of the wax image of an enemy before the fire, an old Scottish superstition embalmed in Rossetti's poem, "Sister Helen."

Eat a thimbleful of salt, go to bed backward, and in silence, and the man you are distined to wed will bring you water in your dreams. If in a tin cup, you will be very poor; if a glass, comfortably well off; but if you quench your thirst from silver, you will be wealth.

In Germany, the fraulein goes into the garden backward at midnight, and pulls a cabbage. If earth adheres to the roots, she will marry rich.

More pleasing, however, are the tricks that can be tried in gay company, such as the naming and burning of nuts, as having been blindfolded, to dip your hand into one of these bowls set before you, one empty, one filled with clean and one with dirty water. The clean signifies that you will wed a man never married before, the dirty a widower; and the empty one means you will not marry at all. It is also very amusing to drop melted lead into a bowl of cold water, when it will assume fantastic shapes, supposed to indicate the calling of the future partner of your joys and sorrows.

The press of Bloomsburg has done as much for the good of the community, morally and temporally, as any other agency. It favors the enforcement of all laws that are made for the suppression of crime, and for the welfare of the people, and it is ready to join hands with any organization that will start a movement for the enforcement of laws that will be of some benefit to the people, whether those laws apply to week days or Sundays. In such matters however the press does not "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel."

The contract for printing the ballots for the election next month has been awarded to THE COLUMBIAN by the county commissioners, and the work is now going on. The change in the law makes a great difference in the number of ballots necessary. Last year it required nearly 40,000 including both official and specimen, and it took over a ton of paper. This year there will be but 16,400 ballots printed, requiring only about one-fourth as much paper.

FOUND DEAD AT IRONDALE.

The body of William Brewer, a young colored man, was found in the casting room of the old Irondale furnace last Saturday night, a little before six o'clock, by Frank Dietterich, who notified Guy Jacoby Esq. Word was sent to Coroner F. W. Redeker at Espy, but he was not at home, and so Esquire Jacoby went out and swore in the following jury: J. W. Sands, J. E. Jones, George West, J. C. Millard, William Drum and Jacob Stiner. After viewing the body the inquest adjourned until Monday morning at Esquire Jacoby's office, where after hearing the testimony of several witnesses they found that the deceased came to his death from drinking too much whiskey.

The evidence showed that on Saturday afternoon Brewer was drinking with three white boys. They raised sixty cents among them and Brewer came in town and bought a qtart of whiskey. At about four o'clock they went to the Irondale furnace, and there took turns drinking out of the bottle, Brewer taking considerable more than his share. He soon showed signs of intoxication, and said he would lie down and take a nap. The other boys found a board and an old sack and he lay down on it, and they left him there. He was singing "I want to be an angel" as they came away. Nothing more was seen of him until after five o'clock, when Frank Deiterich went to hunt him at the request of Mrs. Brewer, who lives in one of the Irondale houses. When found his feet and ankles were cold but his body was warm. A crowd soon gathered and on the arrival of the Justice efforts were made to resuscitate him. After the jury had viewed the body it was removed to his home, when further efforts were made to revive him, but on the arrival of Dr. Reber he pronounced life extinct. Brewer was 23 years old. The young men who were with him were William Moore, Edward Deitterich and Robert Jackson.

BURGLARS CAPTURED.

On Saturday night at about half past ten o'clock, the cellar of the St. Elmo Hotel was entered and a three gallon demijohn of whiskey and several bottles of case goods amounting in all to about thirty dollars were stolen. On Monday morning J. L. Girton went before Guy Jacoby Esq. and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Hiram Long and Jonathan Chromis, who were taken in custody by Officers Thomas and Woodward, and brought before the Justice and given a hearing. J. L. Girton testified to the breaking in the cellar and the loss of the liquor. The men entered by the back cellar door by breaking a pane of glass, and unlocking the door, and broke into the liquor cellar with a piece of gas pipe. John S. Williams testified that Long and Chromis told him they were going to get some of Girton's whiskey, and he watched them. They went down to the rear end of the lot and when they disappeared Williams called Harry Doak who works for Winner & Derr, and they watched together. Pretty soon the men came down through the lot one with a demijohn, and the other with a bag full of bottles. Williams and Doak followed them to Catharine street when Mr. Doak came back, but Williams followed them to Chromis' house, where they were emptying the liquor from the demijohn into bottles. It was then late at night, and Mr. Doak told Mr. Girton on Sunday morning what he had seen. The thieves gave Williams a bottle of whiskey and the latter stated that he took it to use it as evidence against them. Doak corroborated Williams' testimony. The Justice committed the men to jail without bail, the charge being burglary. Long and Chromis admit that they broke in the cellar and took the liquor, but allege that two other men planned the theft for them.

Centralia in Danger.

A telegram from Centralia on Monday announces that large cracks have again made their appearance on the main street at Centralia and the buildings in the vicinity have sunk several inches. The Episcopal church has been badly damaged and is doomed to destruction.

The people are vacating their homes to night and the greatest excitement prevails. The cracking is caused by the old working of the Centralia Colliery. The timbers have become rotten and as they fall they carry the surface with them.

Keller, the magician, will be here on the night of November 3rd. Secure seats early, as the house will be crowded.

PARISH HOUSE CASE SETTLED.

The suit of Jonathan Bachman against the Rector, Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Paul's Church, tried at last May court, resulted in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $548.00. Though the church proved that it had made a contract for the erection of a Parish House for a certain amount with Thos. Gorry, and held his receipt in full for the contract price, and Gorry had a written contract with Bachman as sub contractor for the stone work, and showed that he had overpaid Bachman on that contract, Bachman swore that he had a different verbal arrangement with Gorrey for extra work, and the jury gave him all he demanded. The defendants feeling that they had been wronged, took an appeal to the Supreme Court, and the case would have been argued there next April. But a few weeks ago the church authorities concluded that it would be better to settle the case, because it would cost several hundred dollars to carry it to the Supreme Court, and by adding a little more to this, the workmen whom Bachman had not paid would get their money. Accordingly a proposition was made, and after some negotiations, an agreement was reached, and the docket was satisfied by the plaintiff on the payment of $625 by the church. The full amount of the debt, interest and costs, was about $850.

NORMAL SCHOOL NOTES.

The most interesting place on "Normal Hill" at present, outside of the class-rooms, is the gymnasium.

Work here is progressing rapidly.

The running track is almost completed or ready for the Narragansett people to lay their track, and it promises to be a fine one.

It is now in mind to formally open the new gymnasium on Thanksgiving day. Many invitations will probably be sent out, and it is hoped that many former students and friends of the schoool will be present to show their interest in the growth and prosperity of our Normal School.

A committee of the Faculty has been appointed, to prepare a suitable programme for the day and occasion.

No report has been made as yet, but we doubt not that all who spend Thanksgiving day on the hill, will be pleased and glad to know that each new year marks changes and improvements for the school.

A large force of men and teams are now at work, under direction of the superintendent of grounds, grading the campus lying west of the buildings.

To level up the hollow is a great big undertaking but the corps now at work make daily impressions upon the big hole, and with ten days more, we will not know the place. This when finished, will make an elegant ground for field sports.

The authorities of the school deserve much credit in their zeal to make every part of the school as it should be.

Our citizens should not fail to hear that splendid entertainment by the Boston Ideal Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club

They fill the first night of the Students Lecture Course, for this season, on Wednesday, Nov. 1.

The diagram is now open at Brooke & Co's. store.

The second number comes December 4th, and is filled by that Prince of orators, Hon. George Wendling.

KILLED AT LIME RIDGE.

A man named Thomas and two other men got on a freight train on the D. L. & W. railroad at Danville on Monday morning to come to Bloomsburg, and on reaching here concluded to go on to Lime Ridge to see Thomas' brother. When they arrived there the other two jumped off the train safely, but Thomas' slipped and fell under the train, and his legs were cut off and his head crushed in, killing him instantly. The remains were taken to an undertaker's and prepared for burial, and were taken to his home in Danville on Tuesday morning. He was about 23 years of age.

Alexander Bros. & Co. have recently placed in their store some beautiful new show cases for the display of their goods. Among the articles shown by them is the finest line of meerscham pipes and cigar holders ever shown in Bloomsburg, in fact few of the inland cities can exhibit such an assortment. They also have some novelties in the way of sweet briar pipes, in odd shapes with amberine stems, with neat cases. These goods are all new, and the latest in that line. It is worth the time of every smoker to call and see them.

BRIEF MENTION.

About People You Know.

Dr. J. P. Welsh went to Easton on Wednesday to lecture at an institute.

Mr. Dr. E. F. Smith returned to her home in Goshen, N. Y., on Tuesday.

Elmer E. Mears spent Thursday in Philadelphia on business.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Leader were at the World's Fair this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Billmeyer returned from Chicago on Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ikeler came home from their wedding trip on Monday.

R. W. Oswald was confined to the house several days by an attack of rheumatism. He was able to be out again on Tuesday.

Warren Eyer returned from the west last Friday, after an absence of two years. He has been in South Dakota, and other western states.

Miss Maud Patterson went to New York on Monday, and will be absent a month or more, visiting in that city and Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Harman of Downingtown, have been visiting relatives in this county the past two weeks. Mr. Harman is a brother of P. S. Harman.

Mrs. E. Jacobs had a stroke of paralysis on Wednesday afternoon, and is lying in a critical condition. She was conscious on Thursday, and was believed to be slightly better.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Waller Sr. and L. E. Waller Esq. returned from the World's Fair last Saturday. The venerable Doctor came home in better health than when he started.

Rev. W. C. Leverett was prevented from attending the fall meeting of the Archdeaconry of Williamsport, which convened at Shamokin on Tuesday, by sickness. He was confined to his bed for several days.

Mrs. Melick who has been visiting her parents here, returned home on Tuesday. She sang solos at the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning and evening, and her voice has lost none of its sweetness.

The engagement of Miss Jessie Mann of Sunbury, and Mr. Horace Otto of Williamsport is announced, and it is said the wedding will take place next June. Miss Mann is well known here.

W. C. Shaw and his men have repainted the house of T. B. Miller on Third street now occupied by Prof. F. H. Jenkins. It is very much improved in appearance. Mr. Shaw knows how to do a good job.

Mr. W. Keefer says we were mistaken last week in saying that he attended the fair with his wife. As he is not married, we cheerfully admit the inaccuracy of the statement, and will call our informant to account at the first opportunity.

Louis Bernhard Jr., is one of the youngest school teachers in the state. He has been teaching at Nescopeck, and recently passed an examination before the Luzerne County Superintendent and now has his certificate. He spends his Sundays at home, and is one of the most faithful members of St. Paul's vested choir.

Lizzie, daughter of Dr. D. J. Waller Jr., has been seriously ill for several weeks. On Saturday last Dr. Montgomery of Philadelphia was called in, and went to Indiana county to see her. After an examination, he pronounced a surgical operation necessary, and on Monday Mr. and Mrs. Waller and Miss Petriken, a trained nurse, went with Lizzie to Dr. Montgomery's hospital in Philadelphia, where the operation was performed on Thursday. The result has not been learned. The many friends here earnestly hope that it may result in the child's complete restoration to health.

The Williamsport Saturday Evening Review is a new weekly paper recently started in Williamsport, devoted to the news of society, secret orders, bicycle clubs, military musical and personal news, with humorous matter and handsome illustrations. It is edited and managed by W. H. Showers, a gentlemen thoroughly fitted for the successful conduct of such a paper. A Bloomsburg letter appears in the Review each week. The price is 5 cents a copy or $2.00 a year.

MEDAL AND DIPLOMA AWARDED.

The Mears Manufacturing Company has been awarded separate medals and diplomas at the World's Fair on their washing machines, dog power and churn. They made a very creditable exhibit at the Fair.

TELLING THE CHILD A STORY.

At tea-time in the ruddy light—
Chrisanthemums were in their glory—
My baby came to say good-night,
And beg for just "one little story."

I told her how a girl like her
Came long ago, somewhere or other,
And brought her doll and made a stir,
And begged a story from her mother,

Who, tired and listless, also crossed
The little story-begging beauty
With news of how another glossed
Her irksome story-telling duty.

Still backward was the tale referred
To weary her, but when I ended,
As if I had not said a word,
With looks half-pleading, half-offended,

She clasped my neck—her childish trust
Had made the hardest heart compliant—
"A little one," she said, "please—just
About a fairy and a giant."

I kissed her close, and off I went:
"Once on a time," low, slow and steady,
She heaved a sigh of sweet content:
My darling was asleep already.

—Good Words.

A STRANGE WILL.

It Brought Fortune and Happiness to Two Lovers.

Yes, she was dead at last—Margaret Demorest, of Stony Lodge—and the shock of her demise had shaken Bellevue from center to circumference. For years her numerous relatives, each with an eye to the estate, had watched her movements from a respectful distance, which she herself had interposed between them, and their hearts had grown sick with hope deferred.

Heart disease, the doctors said, when she was found one morning with a smile of peace frozen on her stern and withered features. The relatives accepted the verdict with due resignation, following the remains of the "dear departed" to their final resting place amid an ostentatious display of crape. But when the will was read the excitement of the heirs-at-law rapidly ascended to fever heat. Always eccentric in life, Miss Demorest had retained that eccentricity to the end and woven it into her last will and testament.

With the exception of a few bequests to her servants, the whole of her property, landed and personal, to wit: Stony Lodge, her present residence, with its beautiful park, which was a very Eden of loveliness; Rose Villa, her winter resort on Lake Helen, Fla., together with a splendid house in town and money to the amount of five hundred thousand dollars, was to pass into the sole possession of that one among her kinsfolk who should discover the hiding place of the twelve Demorest rubies.

Should the gems remain undiscovered after the lapse of one year from the date of death the estate was to be sold and a home for old maids founded with the proceeds.

"The old cat!" muttered fashionable Mrs. Meredith, viciously. "She hid those rubies herself, the spiteful thing!"

"It is too provoking!" pouted her pretty daughter Maude.

"I shall contest the will," said thin-lipped Reuben Gray. "It cannot stand."

Mrs. Meredith was Miss Demorest's niece and Reuben Gray her nephew. The two were brother and sister and the nearest akin to the dead woman.

Next came Margie Vane, child of a favorite nephew, who was to have been the heir had he not displeased his aunt by marrying against her will a girl of obscure parentage—"a pauper," Miss Demorest called her.

Harold Vane had died some years back, closely followed by his wife, and the one daughter, Margaret, was left alone in the world and utterly penniless.

Mrs. Meredith had taken her—for the old aunt had remained obdurate—and she was now serving in the capacity of maid to her beautiful cousin Maude.

Margie Vane was not present at the reading of the will. Mrs. Meredith considered it unnecessary, and Margie herself had not the faintest hope of being remembered kindly by her father's stern old relative. When, therefore, they returned in anger and disappointment and gave an account of the wording of the will Margie's hazel eyes opened wide with wonder.

That afternoon and many ensuing afternoons Mrs. Meredith, Maude and Margie walked over to Stony Lodge and wandered fruitlessly about amid the treasures of bric-a-brac, statuary, books and rare old china.

On one of these occasions Margie met Will Demorest, a cousin several times removed of her father. He was a frank, handsome young fellow, with dark blue eyes and close, curling, fair hair. His was the genuine Demorest face, the index of a strong, noble character.

By occupation he was an artist in glass-blowing, having learned the art in Venice. He had done considerable work for Miss Demorest, with whom he was a prime favorite.

"So you thought you would have a look for the rubies with the rest of us," said Mrs. Meredith, with a sneer, as she found the young glassblower examining the books in the library one morning. "Yet I thought you abhorred mercenary considerations."

"I am not in quest of the gems," Will replied, as his eyes rested in unmistakable admiration on Margie's fair, sweet face.

"Humph! I hope you don't take me for a lunatic or a fool, Will Demorest," was the scathing rejoinder.

"For neither, I assure you," said Will, with a bow. "Only at present I am more interested in pearls than rubies. Cousin Margie, may I show you the house? I believe I know it more thoroughly than most people."

Margie shyly acquiesced, and the two went off together, leaving Mrs. Meredith and Maude to continue their search.

"Are you anxious to find the rubies also?" asked Will, as they paused in the china closet to admire the cut glass.

"I have not even looked for them," answered Margie, with a bright smile.

"They are magnificent gems," said Will, "and were never set. I saw them just once, and they nearly took my breath away."

"I should like to see them," Margie said, musingly; "but oh, Will, were they more beautiful than these exquisite cups? Surely that is impossible."

The cups in question were, indeed, exquisite. Blown of the costliest Venetian glass, lily-shaped, with curled leaves for saucers, and glowing with rainbow tints, they resembled nothing so much as a bed of gorgeous tropical flowers.

Margie's eyes sparkled as she looked at them.

"How lovely! How dainty! How fairy-like!" she exclaimed, breathlessly. "See, Will; this one is exactly like an opal with a touch of fire, and here is an amethyst and here a glowing emerald. Oh, Will, do look! See how that strange glow, as of hidden fire, flashes from each! This one is jacinth, this beryl, and—Will Demorest, here is a ruby! Oh, the beauty! The real gems cannot be more superb!"

As she spoke she took the ruby cup into her hand. Will half started forward as if to prevent her, but drew back again with a pale, startled face.

Before he could frame a reply Mrs. Meredith and Maude appeared upon the scene.

"Margie," cried the former, "put down that cup and come along. I should think you would have more pride than to dawdle here all day talking with Will Demorest."

Margie's soft, hazel eyes filled with tears as Lawyer Fay entered the room, and from under his bushy brows glanced sharply at each of the group.

"Hunting for rubies, eh?" he said, sarcastically. "But Miss Margie seemed to be the only successful one of the party. This is a rare bit of glass, Miss Margie, and was blown by our friend here," with a motion of his hand toward Will.

Margie's hand tightened on the cup in her surprise; her rosy forefinger pressed a raised stamen in the calyx of the lily bell, when, presto! change! it sank beneath her touch, and her startled eyes gazed straight into a small cavity where glowed a ruby of inestimable value, like a drop of rosy fire.

"Solved!" shouted Lawyer Fay, as his eyes also beheld the gems.

Will, very white, shrank back against the wall, while Mrs. Meredith and her daughter pressed closer to Margie and the lawyer.

"The rubies!" gasped the avaricious woman, making a dive for the other cup.

But her lawyer placed himself in her way.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "The discovery is Miss Margie's, and, in accordance with the terms of the will of my deceased client, she is sole heiress to the Demorest estate."

Mrs. Meredith grew pale with chagrin. Maude burst into tears, and Reuben Gray, who had heard all from the door, announced his intention of breaking such an unjust will.

"You may try it," was all Lawyer Fay said to the threat.

Will came slowly forward and congratulated Margie on her good fortune.

"And my congratulations are none the less sincere that with them I resign the sweetest hope of my life," he said.

"Resign a fiddlestick!" muttered the old lawyer. "Margie, that boy refused to be made Miss Demorest's heir—insisted that it would be an injustice to those nearer of kin. Then she made him blow these cups of tinted glass, with the central cavity and spring. She inserted a ruby in each cup, which, combined with the different tints, gave them their rich coloring. He watched her hide the rubies and he has kept the secret. Does he not merit some reward?"

Margie flushed and glanced timidly at Will. Then she looked around for her aunt and cousin. Both had disappeared.

"Take her, Will," said the old lawyer, with twinkling eyes, "and bless ye, my children."

With a melodramatic gesture he, too, vanished, and I think the young people were not long in coming to an understanding, for cards are now out for the wedding.—Leeds Mercury.

How He Gauged It.

A Devonshire farmer went to London to see the sights. While walking down the Strand he saw a card in a tavern window bearing the inscription: "Devonshire cider sold here." The old man's heart warming towards his native beverage, he entered the public house and called for "a pint o' zider." The liquor being drawn, he placed it to his lips and half-emptied the measure, putting it on the counter with the remark that it was "very poor stuff."

A cockney standing by, thinking he could raise a joke at the farmer's expense, said: "I say, mister, do you know how that cider was made?"

"No," said the farmer.

"Well, I'll tell you. They stuck up a barrel of water at one end of a shed, and stood back at the other end and threw apples at it."

"Did they?" said the farmer, slowly sipping the cider. "Then they didn't hit that barrel mor'n once."—Tit-Bits.

Women and Weather.

In some parts of New England, and perhaps elsewhere, when some common impulse seems to have led all the women to go shopping or visiting, it is customary for old people to say: "Well, well, I guess it will rain tomorrow."

At sea, as might be expected, the same rule does not hold. Thus an exchange reports a nervous lady passenger as saying to a deck-hand:

"Have you ever seen any worse weather than this, Mr. Sailor?"

"Take a word from an old salt, mum," says the deck-hand; "the weather's never very bad while there's any females on deck a-makin' henquiries about it."

The America Cup.

STORY OF HOW IT WAS WON AND HOW IT HAS BEEN DEFENDED.

Harper's Weekly.

The story of the America's cup, how it was won in 1854, and since defended, is an oft-told tale, and no attempt will be made here to go into details that are familiar to every American yachtman.

Come what may this cup must always remain our most treasured trophy, for all our magnificent development in yacht designing is directly traceable to the contests to keep it on this side of the Atlantic. Eight times have we accepted challenges for this blue ribbon of the ocean—six from England and two from Canada, and eight times have we successfully defended it.

The history of these races is the history of marine architecture, and the characteristic progress of the Yankee and the perseverance and sportsmanship of our British cousins are evidenced in every one of the struggles. With each challenge the interest has spread wider and wider, until today, it may be said the eyes of the yachting world has followed the grand struggle between Valkyrie and Vigilant, which began on the 5th.

It was vastly different in 1850 when Commodore Stevens, of the New York Yacht club, then in its infancy, ordered the America from George Steers, the first and one of the most famous of American designers. The building of pleasure yachts at that time was a struggling industry, while racing was confined chiefly to the pilot boats, which were justly renowned. There was, indeed, some desultory yacht racing, and there had been even ten years earlier but it was only beginning to be recognized as sport when the America was put overboard.

George Steers deserves more than a passing notice; he was of a family of builders, and a designer as independent and original as Edwin Burgess and the Herreshoffs who came after him. He revolutionized yacht designing in his day, and built many boats that became noted. Besides the America, he designed the sloop Julia, which in her day was as much of a marvel and unbeatable as was Gloriana in her first season.

Each of these two famous boats has an interesting history. America was sold to an Englishman after her conquest in '51, and did service as a yacht. She was turned into a blockade-runner when the civil war broke out, but in this role she was not a success, and to escape capture was sunk in the St. John's river, Florida. After the war she was raised by the government, and put into commission as a training school for the naval cadets. When the Cambria came over to race for the cup in '70, she was refitted as a yacht and competed, winning fourth place, while the English yacht got no better than tenth; thus did the old boat handicapped as she was, show that after twenty years she was still faster than the latest and fastest British creation. Later she became the property of General Benjamin F Butler, and is still in possession of his son Paul.

The November Harper's Magazine is the concluding number of the eighty-seventh volume. It opens with the second instalment of Edwin Lord Week's richly illustrated account of his journey across Persia by caravan, which grows in interest as it proceeds, and must stand as an important contribution to the literature of travel. William Black's novel, "The Handsome Humes," is finished in this Number. Richard Harding Davis writes of "London in the Season," and there are strong papers on the Indian Territory, by Rezin W. McAdam, and Arbitration," by Frederic R. Coudert; a description of Acadian Louisiana, by Julian Ralph; a discussion of "The Decadent Movement in Literature," by Arthur Symons; a description of "Riders of Turke," by Col. T. A Dodge, and four short stories, including an "imaginary portrait," by Walter Pater, called "Apollo in Picardy."

Lines on the death of Miss Jennie Richendifer, who died Oct. 14th, aged 32 years, 2 months and 11 days. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Hoerz of Orangeville, the text being chosen from Mark, 4th chapter and 35th verse, "Let us pass over unto the other side." The discourse was very pleasantly and instructively rendered, after which the remains were borne to the cemetery and laid in their last resting place. The deceased was a former associate, and was respected by all who knew her.

Well we knew our comrade Jennie,
As we met from time to time;
Now with hearts so sad and dreary,
We are left awhile behind.

We again are called to witness,
The sad rites of those we love;
And we faintly ask the question,
Why was she so early called?

Just a few short years ago,
We were comrades by her side;
But with other friends she mingled,
And was once a mother's pride.

In the Sunday school and choir,
We no more will hear her lays;
But we at this solemn meeting,
Think beyond of brighter days.

When last we met our comrade dear,
And so lightly said "good bye,"
Little thought that next our meeting,
Might be perhaps beyond the sky.

Yet so sudden, sad and true,
The death angel makes his call;
And while we bow submissive,
Repeat that "Christ is all.

Not So Dangerous.

WHY THE OLD TIME SULPHUR MATCH IS STILL SO POPULAR.

"Man in No. 68 wants some parlor matches. He says these eight day sticks are a confounded nuisance," the bell boy said to the clerk in one of the hotels of Kansas City the other day.

"Tell him he'll have to get along with the old style match," answered the clerk. "The insurance companies don't allow parlor matches in the rooms."

"Yes, that's a fact," he continued, in answer to a surprised questioner. "Insurance policies of nearly all companies prohibit the keeping and use of parlor matches in any part of a hotel, but they are generally kept in the offices because they are in greater favor and more convenient than the sulphur match, and the requirement of the policy is to that extent overlooked by both its holders and the issuing company. There isn't much chance for an accidental ignition of a parlor match to do much harm in a hotel office, but they are dangerous things in rooms, where carpets or curtains or stray papers are liable to catch fire from them. They are not only more easily lighted by accident, such as stepping upon them, but as is not generally known, they often break out in flame from spontaneous combustion. You may judge how easily this is liable to happen by holding a bunch of them in the dark and watching the fume that continually arises from them. The sulphur match is not near so dangerous in any of these particulars."

Allow me to add my tribute to the efficacy of Ely's Cream Balm. I was suffering from a severe attack of influenza and catarrh and was induced to try your remedy. The result was marvelous. I could hardly articulate, and in less than twenty-four hours the catarrhal symptoms and my hoarseness disappeared and I was able to sing a heavy role in Grand Opera with voice unimpaired. I strongly recommend it to singers.—Wm. H. Hamilton, Leading Basso of the C. D. Hess Grand Opera Co.

Man's Inconsistencies.

AS ENUMERATED BY ONE OF HIS CRITICAL SISTERS.

A man can bear the deprivation of his wealth with the calmness of a stoic, but he cannot lose his collar stud on the bed room floor without a violent outburst of temper.

A man can smile grimly under the tortures of the rack, but he cannot tread on a tin tack with his bare foot without a bitter howl.

A man can walk forty miles a day and arrive fresh and bright at the end of his journey but he cannot nurse a baby half an hour without complaining that he is utterly worn out.

A man can possess the physical strength of a Samson, but he cannot help to take down the pictures for the annual spring cleaning without feeling completely exhausted with his labors.

A man can beard the savage tiger in his lair without a quiver of his muscles, but he cannot bring an unexpected friend to dinner on a washing day without trembling in every limb.

A man can suffer death at the stake with the dignity of a martyr, but he cannot chase after his hat in a public road without looking ridiculous.

A man will go through fire and water to win the girl of his heart, but he will not allow her to see him with a four days' growth on his chin.

STANCHIONS AND SHED.

New and Very Convenient Device for Feeding Calves.

John Grattan, of Waukon, Ia., sends to the Orange Judd Farmer a description of his device for sheltering and feeding young calves. He says: Set three posts so they will be 4½ feet above the ground and 6 feet apart. Nail two strong cleats 1⅝ inches thick to the posts 3 feet from the ground, leaving a crack 4 inches wide for the 2x4 inch stanchion to work in. Fasten the bottom of the stanchions in the same way, allowing the movable ones to turn on bolts. Place the first fixed bar of the stanchion 6 inches from the post and allow 1⅝ feet in width for each calf or eight calves for the whole shed. The movable bars of stanchions are held by the ordinary drop catch commonly used. By means of a draw bar made of a 1⅝ inch cleat which passes under a wooden guard on post at A and B in illustration, all of the stanchions can be closed at once, which saves the time required to fasten them singly and does not scare the calves, as so often happens in going in front of them. Each movable bar of the stanchion is fastened to this batten by a bolt which passes through a movable bar in a narrow slot about 8 inches long which is cut for it, so that a single calf may be held without shutting all the other stanchions. To prevent large calves stealing milk from weak ones, nail a 2x4 inch piece 1½ feet long to the stationary upright pieces of each stanchion 6 inches from the floor and another 2 feet from the floor and to the outer end of the first. Make two troughs 6 feet long and 6 inches high by 8 inches wide with tight partitions every 1½ feet. Use three front posts for the front end of a shed and cover it with 14-foot rough boards, the parts in the rear being set low enough to give proper slope. Build it on dry ground. Calves should have protection from the sun and rain, especially the cold spring rains which so often cause scours, etc. The cover protects the calf while eating and it can always be fed even during a heavy rain, while otherwise if delicate it will stand in a protected place rather than get out in the rain to eat. There is no need of spending five minutes in feeding each calf. By means of the board troughs all can drink at once. And by having two small timbers beneath it, the trough may be drawn back to pour in the milk and then shoved up to the calves, thus avoiding slopping and uneven distribution of the milk. Tin pails are too expensive, and wooden ones fall to pieces if exposed to the sun. If a calf does not drink all of its milk, that remaining can be dipped out with a small can and given to the others; or if the trough is not over six feet long, it can be easily turned out.

SECURE FASTENING.

How to Keep a Corral Gate Closed Against Swine and Cattle.

In the far west, a barnyard is called by the Spanish name, corral. A gate to a corral that is proof against being opened by swine or cattle should always be provided. One that is excellent for security, and that can be easily constructed by any farmer, is shown in the illustration. It may be of any desired width, but if over three feet wide it should be provided with a diagonal brace, extending from the lower hinge corner to the opposite upper corner. The gate is made of one-inch lumber, four inches wide, with bottom pieces six inches wide. The vertical cleats on the sides are double, and secured by wrought or wire nails, driven clear through and clinched. A sliding bar, a, with peg, b, extending through for a handle, is notched on the upper side and placed between two of the gate bars. Two cleats, c, of one-by-six stuff, are nailed across two bars on the hinge side of the gate. To these cleats a drop catch, d, is fastened by a wooden pin, so that it will allow the sliding bar to traverse beneath. When the sliding bar is pushed forward into a mortise in the post, the catch falls into the notch, and no cow or horse can possibly remove it. — American Agriculturist.

The Cost of Meat Products.

Few stockmen know the approximate cost of their live stock. Many charge the principal outlay to the grain consumed, and take small account of the grazing. It is only where pastures are divided so as to give a lot exclusively to one sort of stock that a close estimate is possible. The rental value of the ground may be charged against the animals grazing on it during a season. Besides grain and grazing, the time of the attendant must be included. Usually when such estimates are made it would be fair to add ten per cent. to complete the total cost. If account is taken of losses by accident and disease, and interest on cost of animals is added, a higher per cent. for incidentals is required.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Aiding the Digestion.

Succulent food, such as silage, turnips, beets, carrots and pumpkins, aid digestion by the natural juices of their cells. Dry food undergoes some changes during the process of drying, and a portion of the matter becomes indigestible, but the green and succulent food contains a large proportion of water, the whole being in a natural condition for digestion, easily soluble, and promoting the health of the animal by affording it a greater proportion of nutrition.

The Life of an Actress.

The physical hardships of the life of an actor under the present system are unendurable to most women for any length of time, writes a modern society actress in the October Ladies' Home Journal. There is scarcely a little town in America that has not its opera house, for the most part very pretty as to auditorium and exterior, very bad as to the quarters for the players. Many a night I have dressed in a little closet of a dressing room, heated to suffocation, and gone on a stage swept by a cold draught. A word as to pay. It has been said "there is no better-paid profession." That is true of the members who have won sufficient reputation to insure them constant engagement at their own terms. But meantime? In the first season one may expect from fifteen to twenty-five dollars a week if one has "good luck." Traveling expenses are paid. That sounds enormous to the girl earning three dollars a week at sewing or chamber work—seems very good pay to the tired teacher, and quite a brilliant fortune to the young girl in her father's home with no knowledge whatever of pecuniary matters. But the problem is very simple. Each actor pays his own hotel bills. The company is informed of the names and rates of all the hotels in each town. One dollar and a half per day is the lowest price at which can be had comfortable beds and sufficient food to sustain life. Seven times one dollar and a half is ten dollars and a half. Nine dollars and a half out of a possible twenty dollars for clothing and all extras, and clothing means considerable when one travels incessantly.

A Locomotive Race.

BETWEEN AMERICAN AND FOREIGN MAKES A PROBABLE FEATURE OF THE FAIR.

There may be an international locomotive race at the World's Fair. W. J. Arkell has offered to give a $1,000 cup to the winner of a trial of speed over a course not less than ten miles long, between the crack locomotives of England, France, Germany and America at the fair.

Mr. Arkell has written a letter to George H. Daniels, general passenger agent of the New York Central railroad, asking the company to enter a locomotive to represent the United States. Mr. Arkell and Mr. Daniels have gone to Chicago to have a talk about the subject with the representative of foreign railroads at the fair.

In Paint the best is the cheapest. Strictly Pure White Lead is best; properly applied it will not scale, chip, chalk, or rub off; it firmly adheres to the wood and forms a permanent base for repainting. Paints which peel or scale have to be removed by scraping or burning before satisfactory repainting can be done. When buying it is important to obtain properly made. Time has proven that white lead made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion possesses qualities that cannot be obtained by any other method of manufacture. This process consumes four to six months time, and produces the brand that has given White Lead its character as the standard paint.

IN CORKSCREW GULCH.

The Tragic Results of Jumping a Mining Claim.

Hank Thought That at Last He Had Come Into His Own, But He Met Death Instead—Retribution Close at Hand.

It was New Year's eve in the camp, and the Gold Nugget saloon was doing a heavy business all along the line. Drinks were being rapidly dispensed over the counter, and in the rear faro, roulette and poker were flourishing.

Pete was in high humor. He had "bucked the tiger" successfully tonight and had quite enough ahead to work his claim in Corkscrew gulch.

True, he had not done his assessment work this year, and by law anybody could "jump" the "Lone Star" that very day at midnight. But Pete was not the man to be fooled with, as he already had two graves to his credit in Doc. Turner's ranch (the name applied to the cemetery in honor of a local doctor), which contained the bodies of two "tenderfeet" who had "differed" with him and were accidentally shot. So the inhabitants of Galensville concluded he was a safe man to let alone, and he laughed at the idea that anybody would be so foolish as to "commit suicide," as he termed it, by attempting to jump his claim.

The old year had but a few minutes to live when Hank tied up his horse among the tall, snow-laden pine trees near the "Lone Star," and, loosening the thongs which fastened a pick to the horse's saddle, and transferring a couple of sticks of dynamite and some candles from his saddle-bag to his pockets, shouldered the pick and slowly mounted the tortuous trail.

He had long awaited this moment. Four years ago he had owned the "Lone Star" himself, but sickness came and he could not work his assessment, and when he returned to the prospect and found Pete, armed to the teeth, in possession, he had accepted his hard luck with a good grace, but had "laid" for Pete ever since. But now at last his opportunity had come, and he determed to regain his property and defend it at the risk of his life if necessary.

The tunnel was soon reached, and the moonlight, streaming aslant its black mouth, easily disclosed to his eyes Pete's location stake.

He then lit a candle and, finding a board, quickly sharpened one end of it and smoothing off the broad end wrote his location notice on it—rechristening the claim the "Bright Hopes"—and planted the stake firmly in the ground.

Thinking he would go into the tunnel and "see how it looked" he took up his candle and pick and started in.

A few minutes later Pete stepped in view, with a week's supplies in a sack slung over his shoulder.

Before he could put his burden down, Hank suddenly rose up before him with the muzzle of his pistol almost touching the other's face.

"Hands up!" he cried. "I've got the drop on yer now."

Pete, seing the other man had a full hand, promptly threw up his, while Hank deftly relieved him of his firearms.

"'Tain't worth fighting about, anyhow," said Pete, carelessly. "There ain't a pound of ore in the hull claim."

"Oh, come off!" said Hank. "How about all that ore you shipped last summer?"

"That was out of a pocket which I struck which petered out mighty quick; but if you don't believe me, I'll go in the hole and show you;" and, taking a candle, Pete started in the tunnel, Hank following, but keeping his hand within easy reach of his gun.

The breast of the tunnel was soon reached, and Pete, holding his candle up before it, said: "There now, what did I tell yer? It's nuthin' but dead rock."

Hank took his candle and carefully examined the breast, roof and sides, but not a trace of mineral could be seen.

"You're welcome to her," said Pete; "I've blown in all the money I want to; you can have a blast at her now, if you want to."

Hank did not reply, but seemed to be lost in thought. Finally he said: "Hold my candle a minute, Pete," and, taking up his pick in both hands, he struck the breast a heavy blow, and the rock and mud with which Pete had plastered it to fool curious and unwelcome visitors fell away, exposing a vein of glittering white metal.

Almost at the same instant there was a deafening report, and Hank fell to the ground with a bullet through his heart.

Pete, with a smoking revolver in his hand, which he had snatched from Hank's belt as he struck the blow, stood over him with a grim smile, and muttered: "Another suicide."

But retribution was close at hand. The reverberations of the shot had hardly died away among the neighboring peaks when a rock which had long been loose, started by the sudden shock, fell from the roof, bringing tons of earth with it, and Pete and his third victim were crushed into a shapeless mass.

J. J. Van Alen was confirmed by the Senate as Ambassador to Italy, last Friday.

Senator Hill has given the outlines of the proposed new tariff measure. Bounties and subsidies will be cut off, and raw material will be placed on the free list.

After a long contest in the Senate, repeal of the Sherman purchasing clause in the silver bill is now in sight. The fight is conceded by the silverites to be over, as they prefer unconditional repeal to the proposed compromise. A vote may be had by Saturday.

Twenty-seven people were killed and twenty-three injured by a collision on the Chicago and Grand Trunk line at Battle Creek, Michigan, last Friday, the result of disobedience of orders by the engineer. The cars caught fire, and twenty-six bodies were burned to a crisp. The engineer and conductor were arrested.

Democrats should bear in mind that the republican candidate for county treasurer has not withdrawn, and it is understood that he does not intend to so. One of the inducements held out to Jos. P. Dewitt to run as an independent candidate, was that R. S. Bowman would withdraw and the republican vote would be cast for Dewitt. This was merely a trick, however, to get two democrats in the field, as the republicans have no intention of voting for Dewitt, but will make a strong effort to elect their candidate with Dewitt's help. But if Bowman should withdraw, Dewitt would then, to all intents and purposes, be the regular republican candidate, and any democrat who votes for him would be voting directly with the republican party. If Bowman does not withdraw, a democratic vote for Dewitt would be the same as a vote for the republican candidate. No one has attempted to give any reason why J. R. Fowler should not receive the solid democratic support, for no such reason exists, and from the reports that are coming in from every township, Mr. Fowler will be elected by the usual big majority.

Developments show that there has been a change in the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road. It is now included in the Vanderbilt sphere of railroad influence. Forty thousand shares of stock of the road have been transferred to the name of William K. Vanderbilt. It is said that he had bought about 15,000 more shares, which would be formally put in his name.

It turned out that Mr. Vanderbilt had entered into an arrangement as to the Lackawanna with Frank Worth, the owner of 30,000 shares and with J. Rogers Maxwell, Harris Fahnestock and George F. Baker, who control the Central railroad of New Jersey and who also hold some 30,000 shares of Lackawanna stock. The combined holdings make about 125,000 shares. It is not a majority, but with other stock which can be relied upon for voting purposes, is sufficient to dictate the future policy of the Lackawanna. The Vanderbilts as a fact own an actual majority of the stock of none of the roads bearing their names except the Michigan Central.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

THE PROPOSED COMPROMISE.

TO BE DECIDED THIS WEEK.

Change of Senate Rules.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23, 1893.

President Cleveland and the democratic Senators—all of them—have found that common ground upon which all democrats can stand without sacrificing either the party or their individual principals concerning the treatment of silver by the government. Readers of this correspondence will not need to be told that I have never for a moment during the long and sometimes seemingly endless controversy in the Senate doubted for a moment that the final result would be such a compromise. To repeat a hackneyed phrase, "the logic of the situation" pointed from the first to compromise as the only satisfactory end to the contest, from a democratic point of view.

The compromise, which has been accepted by the Senate committee that has been wrestling with the problem ever since it was proven that a vote upon the Voorhees bill was an impossibility under the present rules of the Senate, and approved by Secretary Carlisle as President Cleveland's official representative, provides for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law to take effect October 1, 1894; for the coinage from time to time of the silver purchased and of the seigniorage in the Treasury and that to be accumulated by future purchases, and for retiring all greenbacks and Treasury notes below $10 and the issuing of silver dollars or silver certificates in place of them. It was at first proposed to include authority for the issuing of low interest bonds to replenish the gold reserve at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, but some democratic Senators were so much opposed to this that Secretary Carlisle suggested that if the purchase of silver was not continued for more than a year longer he thought the bond issue would be unnecessary, so the bond issue was left out.

It is hoped and expected that this compromise will be put through both Senate and House this week and an end be put to the uncertainty. If it is not it will not be the fault of the democrats. The republican Senators have given no indication of how they regard the compromise, although before it was agreed upon a number of them stated that they would support no compromise that did not include the issue of bonds. The populists Senators do not like the compromise even a little bit, but unless they are assisted by the republicans they can do no harm. If the republicans join them in voting against the measure and Senator Irby of S. C., votes with them instead of with the democrats the compromise may be jeopardized, if not actually defeated.

The business of the House is in such a condition that the silver compromise can be at once taken up if it passes the Senate this week. Should it be finally disposed of this week, it is altogether probable that Congress will take a recess, as many of the Senators and Representatives are anxious to take part in the closing day of the various state campaigns, and the new tariff bill is not expected to be ready to be reported to the House much if any before the beginning of the regular session. President Cleveland is also anxious to take a short vacation before the beginning of the regular session.

Senators Voorhees, Hill and others are so anxious that the rules of the Senate shall be so changed as to allow a majority to order a vote upon any measure after thirty days have been devoted to its discussion that the resolution of Senator Voorhees providing for the change may be taken up as soon as the silver compromise is disposed of. Should that be done there will be a very lively debate, entirely outside of party lines, as it has friends and opponents in both parties, and the result will be doubtful, the chances favoring defeat.

Four democratic Senators—Martin of Kans., Hill of N. Y., Vance of N. C., and Irby of S. C.—voted against the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. J. J. Van Alen, to be Ambassador to Italy, but as 10 republicans voted for confirmation the nomination got through by a vote of 39 to 22. No Senator, either democrat, republican or populist, believes that there was any truth in the charge that Mr. Van Alen had been nominated as the result of a bargain and in payment for his having made a large contribution to the campaign fund of the party. The democrats who voted against his confirmation did so for other reasons.

From the best obtainable information here the attempt of the populists to capture Virginia will result in a democratic majority in that State little if any short of that given Cleveland and Stevenson last November.

The legislative day of Tuesday, October 17, will be a long one. From that day the Senate for the purpose of lessening fillibustering has taken a recess every afternoon, instead of adjourning, so that the legislative day of Tuesday is still going on in the Senate and will probably continue until the silver compromise is finally disposed of.

The Carbon-Monroe Fight.

IT WILL BE QUITE AS INTERESTING AS ANY IN THE STATE.

Another strong contest is that in the Carbon-Monroe district. In the fight between Judge John B. Storm and the Hon. Allan Craig, Democrats, Judge Storm has secured a temporary advantage, which his political trickery may yet cost him. He is the candidate of Monroe county but not of the judicial district, while Senator Craig is Carbon's nominee, but not the nominee of the whole district. The Carbon-Monroe district gave a Democratic majority of 2,420 last year. Carbon's vote was 3,541 for Cleveland and 3,179 for Harrison, a Democratic majority of 362. Monroe gave Cleveland 3,078 and Harrison 1,020, a Democratic majority of 2,058. But while Monroe gives the greater majority Carbon has the larger number of electors, in the leading parties exceeding that of Monroe by 2,622.

Judge Storm has the almost undivided support of Monroe county, and of County Chairman Michael Cassidy, of Carbon. But Judge Storm is a Monroe county man and the people of Carbon think a Carbon county man ought to fill the position of judge of the Forty-third district. They did not like the appointment of Storm as Judge Dreher's successor and do not wish his election, while Carbon county Democrats enthusiastically endorse Craig and will give Storm a harder fight than he probably anticipates.

Senator Craig, the Carbon county Democratic convention's unanimously chosen candidate for president judge, is fifty-eight years of age and has resided during all that time in Carbon county. He became a member of the bar in 1858 and was elected district attorney in 1860 and re-elected in 1865. He represented his county in the state legislature from 1866 to 1868, and the senatorial district, composed of the counties of Carbon, Monroe and Pike, from 1879 to 1883. Mr. Craig has several times been the choice of the county for congress, but defeated in the conference by not being an adept in political manipulation. He has for many years enjoyed the largest practice in his county, has been engaged in the most important litigation and is the Nestor of the bar.

John B Storm, the nominee of the Democrats of Monroe county, has been more prominent in politics than in the law, having been a member of the lower house of the Forty second, Forty-third, Forty-eighthand Forty-ninth congresses. In late years he has given more attention to his law practice, and upon the death of Judge Dreher Governor Pattison appointed him to the vacancy in spite of the protests of citizens of Carbon county, who felt that their county was entitled to the judgeship, since Monroe county had had her share of the honor, particularly because Carbon is a much more populous county than Monroe. Judge Storm is also a prominent Methodist.—Patriot.

Hood's Healed the Sore in Seven Weeks—A Perfect Cure.

"I will recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as first-class. It has proved its merits to us. Twelve years ago my wife was picking raspberries when she scratched herself on a brier, the wound from which soon developed into a terrible sore, between her knee and ankle. Notwithstanding all we did for it, it continued discharging for eleven long years. We tried medical skill on every side, with no effect. About a year ago she read of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to try it herself, and while taking the first bottle she felt better and continued with it until today she is entirely well and better than ever. The sore was healed up in seven weeks. Her limb is perfectly sound. We attribute her cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." JACOB N. AUGHENBAUGH, Etters, York Co., Pa.

Last Friday morning O. C. Beishline of this township met with an accident that resulted in the loss of his left hand. He runs a traction engine when threshing grain and on the morning above mentioned was preparing to thresh for Mr Reichart near Orangeville. I am informed that while oiling the machinery his hand was caught by the piston rod with the above result. Dr. Stoddard of Orangeville and Dr. Bierman of Bloomsburg, amputated the hand at the wrist joint. He was removed to Mr. Grover's, whose wife is a cousin to Mr. Beishline, near to where the accident occurred. When last heard from he was doing as well as could be expected. Olly is a clever, honest hard working man, and everybody sympathizes very deeply in his unfortunate mishap.

During the fair there were dozens of vehicles for the conveying of passengers in town, which did not belong here, and in some instances the drivers were quite disobliging. On Friday during the heavy rain, a driver with a four horse hack, brought a load consisting mostly of ladies who reside in town, up from the grounds, and driving up to the Central Hotel, coolly told them to get out as he would not drive all over town. They refused to pay him unless he took them to their homes.

There are five or six livery stab'es here, and in ordinary weather these can handle all the people who wish to ride back and forth to the fair grounds or stations. Before another fair, they should make an effort to secure an ordinance to lay a tax on every non-resident hackman who comes here with his rigs to make money. This would be no more than fair to our own liverymen who pay their taxes and help support our home government.

'PANIC!' 'PANIC!'

This is the manufacturer's cry, Not Ours, but it helps you get remarkable good qualities in clothing at very low prices.

Money was never so tight in the history of our business. Such are the words of a leading clothing manufacturer. Cash is what they want. We had it. Last week our buyer went to the markets, bought at our own prices, and now they're here for you. Never in the history of our business have we offered such remarkable qualities at such low prices. We bought them low for spot cash and now they're here for you on the same terms. Fine quality goods, Rochester goods (best come from there). Bring your cash to our store and see what wonders it will work for you, and remember this, we guarantee every garment in our establishment, both price and quality. If you buy anything from us, find you can do better elsewhere, bring them back and get your money. It requires no judge of quality to buy from us as it is our aim to be honorable with all our customers. The boy of ten can buy as well of us as the man of forty. We have but one price for every one and that positively the very lowest consistent with first class quality goods. It would be useless to name prices here as our goods must be seen to be appreciated. IN WOMAN'S BEHALF.

WOMEN IN FRANCE.

They Are Much More Conservative Than The Men.

In one of the recent congresses Mrs. Henrotin, of this city, discussed the question of women in finance, says the editor of the Chicago Tribune, and in the course of her remarks aptly and truthfully said:

Many of the great financial difficulties of the country come from the fact that the women realize in no manner its financial condition. It is imperative that women now take a new stand in the financial world, and should be informed as to the financial condition of the country, and not only that, but she should have the sense of responsibility which would make her attend the meetings of the institutions in which she holds stock. There is a large number of intelligent women in this country owning great financial interests. These women would make excellent directors; with a little exertion they could acquire the requisite knowledge of finance, and then relieve the men of some of the tremendous burdens from which they now suffer. If once the feeling of moral responsibility toward the financial interests of the country could be aroused in women it would be greatly to the advantage of the country. She hates to be in debt and extended lines of credit present no charms for her. She would be a tremendous conservative factor could she once undertake the management of financial affairs

Mrs. Henrotin substantially has thrown out a new suggestion and one worthy of consideration. If woman should acquire a knowledge of finance and take a prominent position in its administration, and if her present feelings should continue and be permanent, she undoubtedly would prevent much of the existing gambling, plunging and embezzlement. If, with adequate knowledge, she had a larger voice in bank management, for instance, she would be conservative and look to the securities, and cautiousness instead of recklessness would characterize the conduct of bank business. Undoubtedly Mrs. Henrotin is correct when she says women hate to be in debt. Those who are careless about debts are the exception. Men seem to be natural born plungers and enjoy risking their accumulations on the turn of a card. Women, on the other hand, are cautious, suspicious, and debt-fearing. If this quality were combined with the requisite technical knowledge of finance and its methods there does not seem to be any reason why women should not make successful bankers and financiers.

It is certain that under these circumstances if women had had control of the National bank of Indianapolis, the Marine bank of Milwaukee, the Pacific bank of San Francisco, the Chemical bank of Chicago, and Silverman's and Schaffner's banks in this city, they still would have been going along, paying one hundred cents on the dollar, and making fair dividends. The high rollers would have no chance to roll, or the plungers to plunge with a cautious woman, hating debts, in charge of finances. Mrs. Henrotin's suggestions therefore as to the moral responsibility of women towards financial institutions, particularly those in which they are interested, are sound. It goes without saying that if women were educated in the mysteries of the finance they would not so often be at the mercy of unscrupulous agents and financiers who easily take advantage of their ignorance.

A WOMAN OF NERVE.

Desperate Battle Between a Woodman's Wife and a Hungry Bear.

A desperate battle took place a few days ago between a famished she bear and the wife of Amos Corey, a woodsman on the Upper Beaverkill, near Turnwood, N. Y., says the New York Times. For several days bear tracks had been seen in the neighborhood, and once a good-sized bear had been seen crossing the road near Corey's cabin. The other morning Corey started with rifle and dogs to hunt down the animal, and had been gone about an hour when his wife heard a great commotion in the dooryard. Just then a little dog ran into the house yelping with terror and covered with blood. Mrs. Corey, thinking of the bear, seized a keen bladed ax from the rack and shutting her baby and little boy in a bedroom ran into the yard. There she saw a huge she bear rolling and tumbling among the sawdust and chips of the woodpile, while over it hovered a swarm of honey bees. The bear had upset half a dozen hives of bees, and the little creatures were having their revenge. Mrs. Corey watched the battle for awhile and then she made a stroke at bruin with the ax, inflicting a severe wound in the animal's side. With a howl the bear rushed upon her, unmindful of the bees. Rising upon its hind legs it advanced upon the woman and tried to hug her. Mrs. Corey plied the ax with energy, and after several blows struck the animal in the head, killing it instantly. She received during the battle a blow from one of the bear's paws which badly lacerated one of her arms. After the bear had been killed the bees swarmed about Mrs. Corey, stinging her severely. They finally rested on the bushes near by, where she succeeded in hiving them. Afterward she was surprised to find that two little cubs had come out of the brush and were smelling about their dead mother. She captured them and after feeding them with warm milk they became quite tame. She will keep the cubs and raise them.

WOMEN AS FRIENDS.

Men Don't Know Them as They Really Are.

A correspondence of the Woman's Journal, in writing of women as friends, says:

A man simply will not believe that a girl does not want him to make love to her; that she likes ideas in conversation better than sentiment; and that, often, the more capable she is of deep and true affection the more she buries that capacity out of sight of the world, and tries, while waiting for the one man who can touch her heart, to keep up merely friendly, impersonal relations with all others.

There is a great untilled field, rich in experience, for men here. If they would understand a woman's nature, let them approach her from the calm, assured standpoint of fellowship, taking into consideration the fact of their common humanity rather than their chance social relations. Women are broader than men believe. They can love not only in one way, but in twenty different ways. Because they must feel a thing before knowing it well, they easily become attached to an opinion, a plan, or an ambition. But they are stanch adherents, and worth having as allies. If a man can once enlist the sympathy of a good woman in his work, he is sure of an anchor after that.

Women are always ambitious for their friends; they delight in a purpose, and will not let it be forgotten. Even the silly and selfish woman can be in a measure lifted out of her narrowness by being made a partner in some worthy aim. Not that it is advisable to seek partners among the silly and selfish; there are numbers of others, intelligent, conscientious and earnest if men really care for them. What stands in the way of an understanding by men of the character of a modern woman is their distrust of her. When they learn to put that aside they will know her as she really is.

GIRL BACHELORS.

A Cynical Man Who Thinks They are Simply Awful.

Dr. George H. Hepworth contributes to the very amusing article on "Girl Bachelors." He tells of a cynical friend, whom nothing in the solar system from the sun to Neptune pleases, who on this particular occasion is growling over the new subdivision in society called girl bachelors. "Do you know anything," he says, "so mortifying as a controversy with a woman who knows more about your specialty than you do yourself? I tell you, my optimistic dreamer, when women begin to hear men say their lessons, to pat them on the head when they say them correctly, and to keep them after school when they say them badly, it is about time to put up the shutters and advertise the business for sale at public auction. You may like that sort of thing, but I prefer a dose of strychnine. I think I've lived quite long enough if women couldn't tell us to our faces that they couldn't run the world as badly as we do if they tried, and that we had better step to the rear for a while and let them straighten things out and make life worth living. I feel positively benumbed when I hear that sort of talk. I can't get my opinion without excoriating my throat."

After some controversy between the author and his friend, one of the veritable girl bachelors enters the room and the growler finds that she can hurl as sharp a spear as he. The article closes thus:

My friend was glum. He rose slowly, got into his fur-lined overcoat, and as he bade me good night, muttered, "It was awful!"

"But isn't it true?" I asked.

"Hm!" he replied. "That's why it is so awful."

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Now They Venture Into Fields Hitherto Uninvaded Save By Man.

Queen Victoria is never seen to lose her temper with her inferiors, but her servants know that household arrangements must go as by clockwork, or the royal lady speedily knows the reason why. As a rule she calls them by their christian names and encourages them to speak freely to her and not to stand in too much awe of her. She always inquires their names when they first come to the palace, and, despite the immense size of her household, she never forgets any of these names. She is a kind mistress and much beloved by the domestic staff.

There are three famous American women of letters at present in London. Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton, Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin and Mrs. Pratt. Mrs. Moulton is a welcome annual in the English metropolis, but this is Mrs. Wiggins' first visit.

The only sister of Rudyard Kipling is one of the foremost of Shakespearean scholars. She is said to know the great poet better than anyone in England, always excepting, of course, Halliwell-Phillips. Miss Kipling's power of memorizing is truly phenomenal. Anywhere one starts a passage she can readily match the line, following straight along chapter and verse, whether it be play or sonnet. Her Shakespeariana is exceedingly fine and though not an author like her famous brother, is yet a student and woman of the finest literary perception.

Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger is seldom seen away from her famous country seat, Idlesse Farm, on Long Island. There she lives in semi-royal state, entertaining brilliant house parties occasionally, but most frequently dividing her time between her writing table and beloved field and gardens. It is said that Mrs. Cruger does not mean to publish again for a year or more, but she is at present engaged on the masterpiece of her successful literary career.

With the exception of Levi P. Morton, Francis Shaw and N. K. Fairbank, the finest herd of Guernsey cattle in this country is owned by Mrs. S. P. Tabor Willets, of Roslyn, L. I. Mrs. Willets farms extensively and with remarkable financial results. Her truck is an important item every morning in the Washington market receipts, and some of the best Hamiltonian blood is found in her stables, where numerous and costly trotters are bred every season.—Chicago Post.

Dueling Unavoidable Sometimes.

Baron von Bauer, Austrian minister of war, said at a sitting of the budget committee of the Austrian delegation the other day that the present condition of society did not permit of the abolition of dueling. He did not approve of duels in principle, but many classes of the population would not, in the event of abolition of dueling, adopt any less forcible method of settling their differences, but would have recourse to "rougher means," the fist, the stick or the revolver. In his opinion there was nothing to be said against an officer who might decline to fight a duel, but he recommended those opposed to dueling to avoid the society of those by whom they might be insulted and to take care not to offend others.—N. Y. Sun.

Origin of the Arab Steed.

The origin of the best strain of Arabian blood has been related by some romancer. While Mohammed was fighting his way to greatness he was once compelled to lead his corps of 20,000 cavlry for three days without a drop of water. At last, from a hill-top, they descried the silver streak of a distant river. Mohammed ordered his trumpeter to blow the call to dismount and loose the horses. The poor brutes, starving for water, at once sprang into a mad gallop towards the longed-for goal. No sooner loosened than came the alarm—false, as it happened—of a sudden ambush. "To horse!" was blown, and repeated by a hundred bugles. But the demand was too great; the parched throats were not to be refused; the stampede grew wilder and wilder as 20,000 steeds pushed desperately for the river banks. Of all the frantic crowd but five mares responded to the call. To these duty was higher than suffering. They turned in their tracks, came bravely back, pleading in their eyes and anguish in their sunken flanks, and stood before the Prophet. Love for their master and a sense of obedience had conquered their distress, but their bloodshot eyes told of a fearful torment—the more pathetic for their dumbness. The danger was over; the faithful mares were at once released; but Mohammed selected these five for his own use; and they were the dams of one of the great races of the desert. From them have sprung the best of Arabian steeds. It can, however, scarcely be claimed that the average horse of the Orient comes up to this ideal. He must have been bred from the 19,995.—From "Riders of Turkey," by Col. T. A. Dodge, U.S.A., in Harper's Magazine for November.

Cream—not Skim Milk.

Every farmer and villager, their wives and boys and girls, will be interested in the big-little, cream-not-skim-milk paper, the FARM JOURNAL, of Philadelphia. Its 200,000 subscribers are scattered from Maine to Washington, and from Michigan to Texas. It's breezy, crisp, boiled-down pages contain as much information in the course of the year as many of the high-priced weeklies; while its earnest, manly tone and its bright and common sense way of treating farm matters leaves a good and lasting taste in one's mouth. The subscription price is 50 cents a year. We have made arrangements with the publisher by which he will send it one full year free, to all who promptly pay up for our paper. Sample copies will be sent free by addressing a postal request to FARM JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa. 10 6-2 m.

How Do You Treat Your Sister?

It is the easiest thing in the world for a boy to be polite to some other fellow's sister; then, why is it some of them find it so hard to remember to be equally courteous to their own sisters? Many a boy is rude to his sister without realizing it; in other words, he forgets to be polite. Then again, he is afraid of being dubbed "sissy" if he should be caught paying some attention to his sister. It is a bad habit for anybody to get into, that of saving one's polite ways for outsiders.

If you meet your sister in the street take your hat off when you speak to her. You would do it for some other boy's sister.

If she asks you a question don't answer it in a rude or careless manner, as if you thought she didn't know what she was talking about, and wasn't worth listening to.

Don't guy her or make fun of her in any way to hurt her feelings. You wouldn't do that to some other girl.

You can just bank all you've got on the boy who is kind and thoughtful to his own, for you may be sure he will develop into the right sort of a man that is bound to win the respect and affection of everyone.

The Change of Life.

Women nearing this critical period require strength, health, and cheerful spirits.

The sole aim of this time should be to keep well.

Street Fakes and Fakirs.

The old truism that "you can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time" has long been respected as one of the most epigramatic expressions of which Lincoln ever delivered himself. But to the surprise of those theorists who have claimed that with each succeeding year the percentage of intelligence of people has increased, they are forced to acknowledge that more people are annually being "roped in" by various "fake" schemes and schemers than ever before.

Of course this is due in part to the increased number of such methods of making money by gulling the people. Every day we hear of some new scheme by which the credulous have been taken in and not only the ignorant are duped, but men and women of all classes have found themselves the loser by some venture with an unknown though oily tongued stranger. Perhaps many of these losses can be credited to a blind avarice that leeds men into "get rich quick" and "soap bubble" speculations and there are thousands of such which are never heard of, simply because the people who have lost in them keep quiet to conceal their plight.

Shamokin is infested with fire bugs, and several buildings have been destroyed during the past six weeks by these evil disposed people. The councils are offering a reward of $500.-00 for their conviction.

Danger in School Pencils.

THE MINNESOTA DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH SOUNDS A NOTE OF WARNING.

There is poison in lead and slate pencils—at least so the department of health of Minnesota decides. Indeed, so serious is the situation that Health Commissioner Hoyt has issued the following communication to the boards of education:

In the majority of our public schools all pencils used by the pupils are collected daily at the close of the school, taken care of by the janitor during the night and indiscriminately distributed among the scholars in the morning. This practice is a very dangerous one and must be stopped at once. Children engaged in the use of pencils will invariably hold the same in their mouth. Very often a pupil will attend school, sometimes several days, suffering from a mild case of diphtheria before the same has been discovered by its parents or physicians. The scholar will use the pencil as aforesaid. The next day it will fall into the hands (or mouth) of some pupil, and in this very simple manner cause numerous cases of diphtheria, the origin of which has heretofore been unaccountable. As a remedy, I would suggest, first, that each pupil be allowed to retain his or her own pencil, and be strictly forbidden to lend or exchange it. If this cannot be done, the janitors must then disinfect the pencils daily.

No fictitious certificates, but solid facts, testify the marvelous cures by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Put to Flight

—all the peculiar troubles that beset a woman. The only guaranteed remedy for them is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For women suffering from any chronic "female complaint" or weakness; for women who are run-down and overworked; for women expecting to become mothers, who are nursing and exhausted; at the change from girlhood to womanhood, and later, at the critical "change of life" it is a medicine that safely and certainly builds up, strengthens, regulates and cures.

If it doesn't, if it even fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

What you are sure of, if you use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, is either a perfect and permanent cure for your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case may be, or $500 in cash. The proprietors of the medicine promise to pay you the money, if they can't cure you.

The greatest bridge builder in the world is the spider, says the New York Sun. "There is a point on the Merrimac River, not far from the Missouri Pacific bridge, where a large spider made a bridge clear across, a distance of over 200 feet. He first sent out a flyer, a sort of kite string, which was carried across the stream by the breeze and lodged in a tree opposite. It was then braced by guys to other branches, and thus fifty feet above the water was a perfect suspension bridge. In comparison with this insect work the Niagara and Brooklyn bridges are trifling."

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

MUD CAKES.

A Little Girl's Recipe.

I don't see why the big folks, all
Need to go to cooking school,
For it's easy enough to make a cake,
If you make it by this rule:

First, you must have an apron
That you're not afraid to hurt,
For in this recipe we use,
For flour, sifted dirt.

Then dig, with an iron spoon,
A hole in the cool, dark ground,
And put in dirt and water,
Stirring it round and round.

And then a handful of pebbles,
You'd best put into the dough.
What are these for? In this recipe,
Pebbles are raisins, you know.

And when you get it all thick enough
You make it into a cake,
Then put it on a nice, clean board
And set in the sun to bake.

Dear me! I'd most forgot to say
You must sprinkle with sugar (or sand),
And when they're done, no better cakes
Will be found in Babyland.

That's all! You see, to learn to cook
You don't need to make a fuss.
Though mamma says, when she comes to the door
"Why, Bessie, child! What a muss!"

ALICE'S GOLD LACE.

How a Girl's Industry Saved Her Whole Family from the Scalping Knife.

In these progressive days so crowed with toilers in every department of life, we find very few opportunities for the cultivation of the art of fine needle-work, which was carried to such a state of perfection by our ancestors. The exact date when the art of lace-making was introduced into Europe is not known, but it is generally supposed that point-lace, the oldest variety of which we have any positive knowledge, was first made by the nuns during the latter half of the fourteenth century. Since the invention of the lace-machine, with its numerous and cheap productions, the prices which the hand-made varieties formerly commanded have been perceptibly diminished. This wonderful machine is said to have been invented by a frame-work knitter of Nottingham, who gathered his knowledge of the art by studying lace on his wife's cap.

In our grandmother's and our great-grandmother's times, when Martha Washington was first lady of the land, to excel in cunning needle-work was considered a great accomplishment. Away back in the days which tried men's souls, a young girl, Alice Pittenger, through her knowledge of lace-making became the means of the salvation of her father's people, saving them from the tomahawks of a merciless tribe of Indians. Mr. Pittinger was an English gentleman, who on account of the reverses of fortune came to the new world about the time the revolutionary war closed. For a few years he made his home in one of the New England states, and then hoping to improve his condition he joined a colony bound for the new settlement then forming on the banks of the Muskingum river. For some time after the Pittengers had taken possession of their new home their relation with the Indians was most pleasant and friendly. Their dusky neighbors visited them frequently, and soon the pale faces became accustomed to their savage ways and learned to trust them implicitly.

Very suddenly and without giving any explanation these friendly visits ceased entirely, and for weeks and months not an Indian crossed the white man's line. Mrs. Pittenger viewed the change suspiciously, but her husband made light of her fears, assuring her that it was only a whim and would soon give place to their old-time sociability. But he was mistaken. A storm was brewing, which at last burst forth in all its fury.

One day when Pittenger and his wife were absent a canoe laden with the treacherous Delawares landed directly opposite the block-house where Alice had been left in charge of the children. The young maiden was seated at her lace-making when the bold chief and his half dozen braves entered the door, and she soon learned from their broken English that they had come in search of food. Alice assisted the serving maid in placing before them an abundance of good, substantial victuals, hoping that they would leave as soon as they had satisfied their hunger; but instead of taking their departure they stood around watching her deft fingers fashioning the dainty lace that was a marvel to them. A roll of gold-lace that she had wrought for a friend across the waters lay on the table by her side. The chief seemed to admire the gay lace so much that Alice gave it to him, hoping by this means to get rid of her unwelcome visitors before the night should come on. The red-man was greatly pleased, and as soon as he could express his gratitude he went away; not, however, until he had made certain cabilistic signs upon the house. Soon after this there was an uprising among the Indians, and tragedy after tragedy was perpetrated by the red-skins upon the white settlers, but no harm came to the Pittenger family.

"Alice's gold-lace is pleading for us in the dark forest and we are safe," said Mr. Pittinger when his wife and children trembled at the tidings of some fresh outbreak. "I am satisfied that these crude marks upon the wall have a meaning, and have kept the lawless tribe from molesting us in any way." And such was really the case, as it was afterwards learned.

One day after peace had returned the chief and one of his warriors appeared unexpectedly at the settler's doors, leading by the horns a beautiful deer which they presented to Alice. Pointing to the lace which he wore upon his gorgeous coat he made the family understand that it alone had stood between them and the scalping knife. From that time forth the Indians remained their warmest friends, and many were the gifts they lavished upon the fair Alice, who by her industry had been able to purchase life for herself and her family.—Christian at Work.

OUT-SPOKEN.

One of the Faults of the Girl Who Always Says Just What She Thinks.

When you hear a girl say, "I always say what I think; I am very plain-spoken," you know that girl does not mind hurting anyone's feeling. When she makes that remark she feels that she has given herself a license to say what she pleases, and you must look out for her. No one gives it to hear; she takes it. She forgets the Apostle's injunction, "Be courteous," says often the very rudest, uncalled-for things. Some of the girls seem to take pride in doing so. They think it betokens originality and independence. Really it only betokens, I think, an unkind and jealous spirit. The words seem to come from a bitter heart, who would see no good in anything or anyone, for a plain-spoken girl never says kind things. They are always unkind. The girl who "says what she thinks," never seems to think kind things, or if she does, she fails to say what she thinks that time.

Did you ever notice this? Suppose you have a new hat. If the plain-spoken girl does not like it, she will tell you it is not pretty. If, however it is so undeniably beautiful that try her best she can not find any fault with it, she will make no remark whatever. She is never plain-spoken enough to tell you it is pretty. If you play or sing, the girl who "says what she thinks" points out to you some flaw in your performance. She never thinks of telling you that you did well.

I have seen this so much that I have come to the conclusion that the plain-spoken girl is nothing more or less than a fault-finder. It is not witty or independent or original, and I would advise all girls who want to be loved to avoid that style of plain speaking. Plain speakers, so-called, rarely have many friends. It is rude, and always hurts some one's feelings. It is neither being a lady nor a Christian.

It does a great deal of harm, too. It is discouraging, and a discouraged person is always likely to be a failure. It takes a very brave spirit to pick up and battle on, when some distressingly plain-spoken or ill-natured person has too plainly pointed out faults. Maybe your comrade is just smarting under the very failure you feel called upon to mention—we should all help each other, and if we can not do it in any other way, we can by our kind words.

Everyone needs encouragement. So if you must be "plain-spoken," tell your comrades when they have done well. Do not be envious; for it is envy that makes girls disagreeably plain-spoken, and never praise. But, "in honor preferring one another," be glad of every nice thing that comes to your companions. Every time they make a success, tell them so. Yes, be plain-spoken if you must; say what you think, but only think nice things. Say nice things when they are true. Isn't that more like being "kindly affectionate one to another?"—Irene Widdemer Hartt, in Watchman.

KEEPING COOL.

A Quality Which Will Help a Boy in Both Work and Play.

Very often if you watch boys playing tennis you will see one lose by carelessness, and let his adversary pile up two or three games. Then, at just the critical time, he will begin to work hard. He may lose his temper. He is sure to get warm, and he may at the same time play very badly as compared with his usual game. It is a case where excitement has taken away precision. This is very bad form, but it is common enough.

It is something that every boy ought to avoid. The confidence and coolness that prevent it are something that every boy ought to make it a business to educate in himself. It will serve him a good turn in many a tight place in tennis or in any other athletic game, or, for that matter, in many other things besides games. This faculty of playing better under difficulty, of "bracing" under the excitement and natural depression of a losing game, is the quality that makes good players and good athletes. You must have seen a baseball nine, with three or four runs against it, in the last two innings pull itself together and win the game by this ability to pluck up its courage, and play as if life and death depended on the result.

At college any man that can play his best in the tightest place, who can play an "up-hill" game, is considered the most valuable man, and it is the same among boys of your age. Some people will say you can not put this quality into a boy, that it must be born with him, but I think if you watch yourself, and get into the habit of playing tennis or other games with better players than yourself, you will have a chance to bring out that quality when it may be somewhere away in the background of your character, even supposing you could not actually put it into yourself. Every healthy boy has manly courage if he only lets it come to the surface. By playing a better man than yourself you will be put on your metal; you will be beaten very likely, but you will at least have the opportunity of trying your ability to keep cool and collected in a most difficult situation—i.e., when you are losing.

It is pretty safe to say that the boy who can bring this peculiar kind of courage into play at the right time is the boy who is most valuable on a team or as a representative of any club. The details of any game are more or less a matter of time, but the faculty of winning a game from a better player, or an equally good one, is something that has less to do with that particular sport than with the fellow himself who is playing.—Harper's Young People.

What He Was Afraid Of.

"I want to go home," whimpered Tommy at the seaside when he saw how brown the sun was making him. "If I don't go soon, I'll turn into a little darky."—Harper's Young People.

Other garments influence a woman, but it is her hat that dominates her.—Puck.

Upsetting Their Calculations.

The late Dr. Yandell was fond of telling the following joke: A lady patient one morning greeted him with the remark, "Doctor, I had such a singular dream about you last night." "Indeed. What was it?" "Why, I dreamed that I died and went to heaven. I knocked at the golden gate and was answered by Peter, who asked my name and address, and told the recording angel to bring his book. He had considerable difficulty in finding my name, and hesitated so long over the entry when he did find it, that I was terribly afraid something was wrong; but he suddenly looked up and asked, 'What did you say your name was?' I told him again. 'Why,' said he, 'you've no business here. You're not due these ten or fifteen years yet.' 'Well,' said I, 'Dr. Yandell said——' 'Oh, you're one of Yandell's patients, are you? That accounts for it. Come right in! come right in! that man's always upsetting our calculations in some way.'"

Jolly Congressmen.

Congressmen have queer appetites, and sometimes evince tastes not known to the epicure. At the older hotels in Washington, a fourth meal known as supper is served from nine o'clock to midnight, and this often becomes the jolliest feast of the day. Where a number of Congressmen are housed at one hotel, they form a large supper party, and from the hilarity that reigns a looker-on would imagine they were imbibing champagne or other exhilarating liquids without end. Often, however, if you could look over their shoulders, you would be astounded to see every one of those Congressmen eating bowls of innocent mush and milk. Another Congressional food is apples. It is a very familiar sight during the sessions of Congress to see a member of the House open his desk, extract a rosy apple, bring out a large jackknife from his pocket, and then seek the seclusion of the cloak-rooms to devour the feast.

CLOSE OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The World's Fair will close next Monday.

Part of the exercises will consist of the presentation of the list of awards to the foreign and domestic exhibitors. The national commissioners, lady managers, directors, foreign and state commissioners and executive officers of the exposition will be invited to participate. On the platform will be President Palmer, as master of ceremonies, on his right the director general, the vice president of the national commission and the president and vice presidents of the lady managers board.

On his left will be seated the president and vice presidents of the board of directors and the officials who are to take part in the exercises. There will be music by bands and a chorus, prayers, addresses by President Palmer, the director general, Mrs. Potter Palmer, the presentation of awards that have been approved by the commission to the foreign and domestic exhibitors followed by an address on behalf of foreign nations and American exhibitors. President Palmer will make a few remarks closing the exposition, and after the singing of Auld Lang Syne by the audience will come the benediction and the end.

The Liberty bell will ring for the last time in the White City at sunset. At 10:30 a. m. will be given a presentation of the landing of Columbus on the lake shore with three caravels, sailors in Spanish uniform and real Indians to welcome them. Between noon and one o'clock will be given a display of fireworks from various points and a monster band concert on the administration plaza later in the afternoon. The grounds and buildings will be specially illuminated at night, and the fair will close with an elaborate display of fireworks.

The Life-Saving Drill at the World's Fair.

Interesting as it proved to be, it was a very tame representation of the real article. A spar had been planted out in the lake at some little distance from the shore, to represent the mast of a submerged vessel, and the passengers to be rescued, consisting of a member of the crew and a small boy in knickerbockers, were rowed out to it in a dingy. The sky was clear and the sun was hot, but the tail end of a lively breeze made quite a little surf on the beach.

When the shipwrecked mariners were placed safely on the cross-trees, the life-gun was run out and fired in the direction of the castaways. The projectile carried with it a long line, which unreeled as the life-saving messenger sped toward its mark. It was so well aimed that it struck the water just beyond the spar, and the line fell upon the cross-trees, where it was at once seized by the man and the boy, who hauled it inboard. To the end of it was attached a stronger rope, which was made fast to the lonely mast, and by means of a lighter line they had soon hauled out a breeches-buoy, into which the lad in knickerbockers was quickly lifted by his magnanimous companion, and the gallant fellows ashore continued the work of rescue.

But whether the boy was heavier than they had calculated, or the mast was not high enough out of water, or the main rope was not stretched taut enough, or simply whether people who are being rescued from marine disaster are not supposed to mind getting their feet wet, I don't know, but the rope began to sag, and the boy began to get nervous and to pull up his feet as he dropped nearer and nearer the surface of the water, and the crowd began to laugh. Little by little the waves began to slap at him as they rolled past underneath to the shore. Now he drew his legs up and passed them over the rope, and the rescue party ashore redoubled their efforts. But the attraction of gravitation was too much for them, and the boy's trajectory passed slowly and surely beneath the surface of the lake, and added a touch of comic realism to the situation which was greatly appreciated by the spectators, as well as by the dripping hero of the occasion.

The next day I went and found the crew out in the self-bailing life-boat going through the capsize drill. Each member wears a life-preserver, and the oars are fastened to the boat to prevent their drifting away. A short way from shore they all climb upon one gunwale, and by a concerted effort capsize the boat, which floats bottom upward. Quickly clambering up and seizing the keel, they right the craft almost as readily as they upset it, nearly all the water running out in the operation, and then rapidly jumping in, they resume their seats, grasp their oars, and are off again on their supposed errand of rescue. In actual service the upsetting part is done by the breakers, and when the breakers don't come to time, the capsizing is usually omitted.—From Harper's Weekly.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

To THE COLUMBIAN,
Sir:—

On the 23rd day of May last, the Governor approved an Act to authorize the election of a Chief Burgess in the several Boroughs of this Commonwealth, and providing that he shall not be a member of the Town Council, &c., &c., P. L. 1893. page 113.

The Act organizing the town of Bloomsburg, provided for a Town Council of six members and a President, to be elected upon distinct ballots, and as to government, put the town upon or under specified sections of the general borough law.

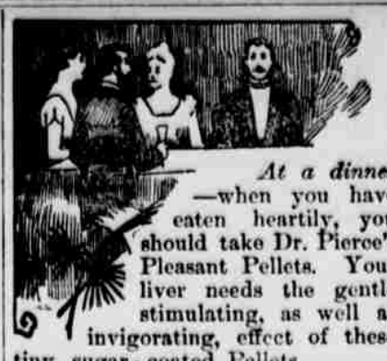
A good deal of uncertainty and confusion exists as to Chief and Assistant Burgess as to membership of the Council &c. in the various Acts, which this one of May 23, 1893, proposes to obviate. It is very general in its provisions.—"The qualified voters of every Borough in the Commonwealth shall vote for and elect a chief Burgess," &c., &c.

Must Bloomsburg elect a Chief Burgess under that statute, and if so, who shall be the man? The powers and duties of the proposed officer cannot be expected of the President of the Town Council. He is a member of the Board elected by the people, and his powers and duties are defined in the Acts referred to, prior to this of 1893.

But again, the President of the Town Council is not, by the Act of 1893, elected by the people, but is a member of the Board, and is to be elected President by the members at the annual organization.

So are we hereafter to elect a Chief Burgess, and not a President of the Town Council, and to elect a Town Council which shall elect from its members a President? And if so, shall we elect six or seven Town Councilmen at the February election?

The Chief Burgess, you will observe is a very important personage. He shall hold his office for three years. He shall have the power of approval, and he shall have the power of veto. Let this matter be looked to, for it needs to be understood before we are called upon to act. QUERIST.



At a dinner—when you have eaten heartily, you should take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Your liver needs the gentle stimulating, as well as invigorating, effect of these tiny, sugar-coated Pellets.

If you feel drowsy, dull, languid, inexpressibly tired or debilitated; if you've no appetite and frequent headaches or dizziness, a furred or coated tongue—it proves that you're bilious. In that case you should carry in your vest-pocket a small sealed vial of these Pellets. They are anti-bilious granules, which act in a prompt and natural way, without griping. So beneficial and lasting is their effect that the makers can afford to guarantee that they will give you satisfaction, or they'll return your money.

ABOUT WOMEN.

GEORGE SAND, when overexcited by writing, employs herself in sewing in order to soothe her nerves.

THE first gymnasium for girls in Germany will be opened this autumn at Carlsruhe. It has been founded by the "Women's Instruction Reform society," formed in the year 1888.

MRS. GRAFTON ROSS, an English woman, has invented a tool for killing obnoxious weeds in gardens. It is in the form of a hollow piercer, through which poison is conveyed to the very heart of the root of a stubborn weed, causing it to shrivel up in a very short time.

WOMEN belonging to a Baltimore cooking school have offered to train in the culinary science one hundred girls attending the grammar schools of the city without charge, hoping thereby to demonstrate the utility of establishing a cookery department in connection with the public schools.

CHOICE HUMOR.

BARLOW—"Who composed this opera?" Cadley—"I don't think it ever was composed. I don't notice any composure in it."

"PARSLOW, what is your idea of a gentleman?" "I am." "By jove, Parlow, you always do have original ideas, don't you?"

"AND how is your table?" asked the prospective boarder. "Splendid," said the landlady. "Why it's so rich that people are dying of indigestion in my house all the time."

"WHAT marvelous vitality Slithurs has! He's been ill six months now. Any other man would have died." "It isn't vitality. It's the times. He is so hard up he cannot even pay his last debt to nature."—Harper's Bazar.

FEMININE FANCIES.

BEADS in every imaginable shape color and arrangement are to be worn.

MRS. CLEVELAND wears little jewelry, though she has cases full of all sorts of precious stones.

DEEP, square collars, sometimes falling in folds at the edge, will be one of the features of autumn jackets.

"I DON'T know of any little fashion more pleasing," said a mother, referring to the vogue of tan stockings with tan-colored shoes for children's wear.

PLAIN cashmere, camel's hair or vailing dresses with trimmings of black velvet are much liked. The velvet is shaped into bretelles, yoke, bodice pieces and cuffs. This is preferred to shirring or plaiting.

La Grippe! Gripp! Gripp! After Effects Cured.

Mr. Bilger writes:—"I had a bad attack of the Grippe; after a time caught cold and had a second attack, it settled in my kidneys and liver, and Oh! such pain and misery in my back and legs.

The physicians' medicine and other things that I used made no impression, and I continually grew worse until I was a physical wreck, and given up to die. Father bought me a bottle of Dr. Kilmer's SWAMP ROOT, and before I had used all of the second bottle I felt better, and to-day I am just as well as ever. A year has passed and not a trace of the Grippe is left. SWAMP-ROOT saved my life."

Lippincott's Magazine for November, 1893

The complete novel in the November number of Lippincott's is "An Unsatisfactory Lover," by Mrs. Hungerford ("The Duchess.") It tells, in the style which has charmed so many readers, of an inauspicious wooing and an interrupted courtship, which at length led to a happy result—for the lover did not always remain unsatisfactory.

The ninth in the series of Lippincott's Notable Stories is "The Rustlers," by Alice MacGowan. It is a powerful tale of the panhandle of Texas. Other short stories, or sketches, are "How the Light Came," by J. Armoy Knox, which narrates a pathetic incident of French-Canadian life, and "Expensive Religion," by Phil Stansbury, an episode in the experience of a colored brother.

The Athletic Series is continued in an article on "Golf," by John Gilmer Speed.

Lewis M. Houpt tells of "Progress in Local Transportation;" Dr. Charles C. Abbott describes "An Old-Fashioned Garden," which contains shade and water, and by consequence also the music of birds; and Wilton Tournier tells "Why the Body should be Cultivated."

"A Three-Volume Tract," reviewed by Frederic M. Bird, is Madam Sarah Grand's remarkable novel, "The Heavenly Twins." M. Crofton continues his series of "Men of the Day" with a brief sketch of Attorney-General Olney.

The poetry of the number is supplied by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, Bliss Carman, Richard E. Burton, and Florence E. Pratt.

Harper's Bazar.

ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S BAZAR is a journal for the home. It gives the fullest and latest information about Fashions, and its numerous illustrations, Paris designs, and pattern-sheet supplements are indispensable alike to the home dress-maker and the professional modiste. No expense is spared to make its artistic attractiveness of the highest order. Its bright stories, amusing comedies, and thoughtful essays satisfy all tastes, and its last page is famous as a budget of wit and humor. In its weekly issues everything is included which is of interest to women. The Serials for 1893 will be written by WALTER BESANT and EDNA LYALL, CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK will furnish a practical series, entitled "At the Toilet," GRACE KING, OLIVE THORNE MILLER, and CANDACE WHEELER will be frequent contributors. The work of women in the Columbian Exposition will be fully represented with many illustrations. T. W. HIGGINSON, in "Women and Men," will please a cultivated audience.

1893.
Harper's Weekly.

ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is acknowledged as standing first among illustrated weekly periodicals in America. It occupies a place between that of the hurried daily paper and that of the less timely monthly magazine. It includes both literature and news, and presents with equal force and felicity the real events of current history and the imaginative themes of fiction. On account of its very complete series of illustrations of the World's Fair, it will be not only the best guide to the great Exposition, but also its best souvenir. Every public event of general interest will be fully illustrated in its pages. Its contributions being from the best writers and artists in this country, it will continue to excel in literature, news, and illustrations, all other publications of its class.
